H. A. JENNINGS DIES AT HIS SCRANTON HOME

One of Baseball's Most Picturesque Figures Was Fifty-Seven

ILL SINCE SATURDAY

Attained Fame On the Playing Field As Well As A Manager

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 1 (I.N.S.)—Hugh A. (Hughey) Jennings, one of baseball's most picturesque figures, died at 1:15 a. m. today at his home here. He was 57 years old. Jennings suffered an attack of meningitis last Saturday and his condition rapidly became worse. The colorful and aggressive manager who won three pennants for Detroit waged a game struggle against the disease after physicians had given up hope for his recovery. He had been ill for three years.

The end came peacefully. He became unconscious on Sunday, but regained consciousness later and chatted with relatives.

Jennings is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Thomas P. McWilliams; two brothers, James and Frank Jennings; and one sister, Mrs. Edward Walsh. All live in Pennsylvania.

And so the famous "E-Yah" of Hughey Jennings is stilled forever. It resounded through the land back in 1907 when the Detroit Tigers started on their winning spurge and Jennings, as their fiery manager, came in for an era of great exploitation. He delivered pennant winners at Detroit in 1907, 1908 and 1909 but was not able to win a single world's series, being beaten by the famous Chicago Cubs of Chance's day the first two years and by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1909.

Jennings remained a colorful, though not successful manager for eleven years thereafter, being finally succeeded by his greatest star, the only Ty Cobb. However, Hughey had the satisfaction of managing a resplendent host of stars during his days at Detroit, the list, in addition to Cobb, including Sam Crawford, Donie Bush, George Moriarty, present manager of the club; Bob Veach, the late Bill Donovan, Charley O'Leary, Bobby Lowe, Matty McIntyre, Davy Jones, Harry Heilmann, George Mullin, "Hack" Schmidt, Oscar Stange and many others.

In his days on the playing field, Jennings attained almost as much fame as he did as a manager. He was the shortstop of the old Baltimore Orioles, of Ned Hanlon, the club that featured John McGraw, Wilbert Robinson, Brodie, Joe Kelley, Dahlen, Willie Keeler, McGann and others. Subsequently, Jennings "lost" his arm and put in a few years at first base, one of them with the Phillies and several more with Brooklyn, then the National League champion.

When Bill Armour was dropped at Detroit, Jennings stepped into the breach. He remained for some fourteen years and, after being superceded by Cobb, he got a job as coach of the Giants under the auspices of his old friend, McGraw. That was in the spring of 1921. He lasted until the end of the 1925 season when tuberculosis claimed him and he was forced to a sanatorium at Asheville, N. C.

He returned in greatly improved health during the 1926 season but did not resume his connection with baseball. Jennings was a graduate of Cornell University and practiced law in his home town of Scranton, Pa., until his health failed. He was born in the mining village of Moolie, Pa., on April 2, 1871.

ST. THOMAS ROYALLY WELCOMES LINDBERGH

Full Day of Activities Planned — Leaves for Porto Rico On Thursday

LAST TRIP 1,000 MILES

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Feb. 1 (I.N.S.)—Following close on the heels of the marvelous reception accorded him on his arrival, numerous receptions and banquets were planned for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today.

Among the functions scheduled in his honor were receptions by the Masonic bodies, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Legislature. A special horse racing program and a masquerade ball will wind up Col. Lindbergh's only full day here.

Tomorrow the flying colonel will fly over St. Croix and then turn towards San Juan, Porto Rico, where he is due to arrive in the early afternoon.

The reception accorded Col. Lindbergh on his arrival after making the 1,000 mile flight from Venezuela was unprecedented in the history of this community. Practically the entire population of St. Thomas, with hundreds from neighboring islands, were on hand when the young aviator was greeted and welcomed by Government Secretary Van Patten who conducted Col. Lindbergh to Governor Captain Evans.

When the Spirit of St. Louis appeared over the harbor here, it circled the field three times before landing. A biplane sent out to meet the visitor and escort him to the landing field failed to find Col. Lindbergh and he arrived alone while the biplane was still seeking him.

MOUNT HOLLY INDUSTRY SUSPENDS BECAUSE OF LACK OF PROTECTION AFFORDED BY AMERICAN TARIFF

Cannot Compete With Foreign-Made Goods, Says Head — Property May Be Sold — Will Be Blow To New Jersey Town's Business Interests

The following news article, from the New Jersey Mirror (Mt. Holly, N. J.) of January 11th, needs no comment. It tells its own story—the story of a once large and prosperous textile plant located in that community, which is about to close permanently when the present amount of raw material is exhausted.

Why? Lack of adequate tariff protection! It is a story of the deepest significance to every industrial community, and we present it here just as it was published in the New Jersey Mirror:

The worst news, from the industrial angle, that has come to the people of Mount Holly and vicinity, in a long while was the announcement, appearing for the first time on Wednesday in The Mirror, that the Royle & Pilkington Company's big tapestry mills would close indefinitely in the near future. There was a great demand for copies of The Mirror and the newsies in some cases had to come back to The Mirror office repeatedly to obtain new supplies of papers during the afternoon.

On every hand expressions of regret at the probable permanent shutting down of the Royle & Pilkington plant were heard. It was regarded as an industrial tragedy in which everybody had reason for concern. Undoubtedly the shut-down will affect many families of the town very seriously, and some probably will be forced to move away to other towns to obtain new employment. While latterly there have been little more than a hundred hands employed and that number is steadily diminishing as the work on hand is finished and raw material is used up, there was a time when around three hundred people were on the pay roll and the release of so much money meant a great deal to the business life of the community. Even with the present reduced force the loss of the Royle & Pilkington Company industry to Mount Holly cannot be regarded other than a serious blow.

Seen at the office of the Royle & Pilkington Company yesterday afternoon, Messrs. Charles Coles and James T. Royle, owners of the plant, stated that there had been no change in their plans. In line with their statement, made to a Mirror representative a week ago, the force would be gradually reduced as the raw material on hand was worked up, until, when that was exhausted, the mill would shut down, probably never to be re-opened by the present company. There have been several small orders received since the announcement of the shut-down was made last week and these will be finished, although this is not expected to delay the final closing more than a few days at most. Mr. Royle, in Mr. Coles' presence yesterday said to The Mirror representative: "The competition of foreign-made goods is the root of the trouble with industry. The tariff wall is too low. Foreign manufacturers can now lay tapestry goods on the docks, duty paid, at approximately forty per cent less than our own cost of making the same grade of goods. That, alone, answers why we have decided that it would be unwise to attempt longer to buck the tide. I can see no future for the tapestry manufacturing business in the country. New treaty agreements with France and other foreign countries are taking away from American manufacturers the only basis of a tariff defense that they have had. With these reciprocal treaties, whereby the United States is given minimum tariff rates for American made goods and France and other countries guaranteed like treatment by our government, the defense of the American manufacturer from cheap European competition is shattered."

Asked whether there would be any prospect of profitable operation if the firm should move its plant to the South where labor conditions are becoming many textile manufacturing establishments, both Mr. Coles and Mr. Royle, said that while they had considered the subject they had come to a conclusion that the present spirit in the textile manufacturing market in the South is destined to prove just that and nothing more. Mr. Royle believes that the improvement of the Southern situation from the viewpoint of the manufacturer, is only temporary. While the market just now is better for "pile goods," such as plushes, wool velour, etc., Mr. Royle said he did not look for this to last; in fact reports coming to the firm have stated recently that the wool velour market appears to be heading for a fall, also.

Mr. Coles said that no definite plans have been formulated as to the future of the mill property. As was stated last week, the plant will not be dismantled immediately, in the hope that possibly somebody will come along and lease the mill. Failing that it is thought by the owners that the mill structure could easily be divided into smaller units to be rented to lesser concerns after the various quarters had been properly separated from one another. Many inquiries have been made concerning the property and there seems to be no little interest in its future both in and out of the trade. Owners and superintendents of concerns, engaged in other businesses, have been in touch with Messrs. Coles and Royle concerning the possible

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS DEFEAT MORRISVILLE

Local Sextet Shows Good Form and Wins by Score of 22 to 15

TO PLAY MOUNT HOLLY

By M. E. N.

Monday afternoon the Bristol high school easily defeated Morrisville high in the Morrisville community house, by a score of 22-15. This is the first time in three years that the high school has defeated Morrisville.

McFadden and Rockhill were high scorers for Bristol, but they had to use some good pass work to get by Robinson, the star player for Morrisville.

Paul and Giagnacova played well for Bristol as guards.

Myton played well for Morrisville as side-center.

The defeat at Bordentown last Friday should not be taken too seriously. Only one point separated the teams after the second half and those who saw the game said Bristol played its best. This was one of the fastest and most exciting games of the season.

Friday afternoon both the boys' and girls' basketball teams meet Mount Holly on the local court.

DEMONSTRATE SINGING AS TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

Children Show What Has Been Accomplished By Instructors

PARENTS ARE PRESENT

An idea of the work the grade pupils in the Bristol public schools are accomplishing in the line of singing, was given to the parents and friends at the high school auditorium yesterday afternoon, through the co-operation of the music instructors, the teachers and pupils.

The program was outlined in a unique manner, children from each of the school buildings in the borough presenting various pictures in song. A cordial welcome was extended by Howard E. James, superintendent of the public schools. It was explained by J. Homer Smith, one of the group of instructors in singing from Temple University, that the children are taught to sing softly, in order that their singing and speaking voices might be preserved.

Farm and garden pictures well told in the following numbers were given by the Wood street pupils, under the direction of Miss Ruth Giltner: First and second grades, "Ban, Ban, Black Sheep" and "News for Gardeners," third and fourth grades, "Little Boy E. H. Harriman and J. D. Rockefeller, Hattenfield," 138 136 102 Blue," "Seed and the Woods," fifth and sixth grades, "In the Farmyard" and "Baby Seed Song," seventh grade, "The Threshers" and "Little Dutch Garden."

With Miss Gertrude Spergel in charge the Bath street scholars presented sea pictures. The numbers were: "Beautiful Sea," "Bobby Shafto," "Sea Gulls," "Echoes," "The Little Sailor Song," "Yo, Heave Ho," "Star Fishing," "Sailor Life," "Fairy Crew," "Lightly Row."

Most appropriate for this time of the year were the snow pictures in song, given by the Jefferson avenue and Washington street school children: 1st and 2nd grades, "King Winter," 3rd and 4th grades, "Snow Blossoms" and "Tall-Tale Tracks," fifth grades, "Flowers and Jewels," and "Jack Frost," sixth and seventh grades, "The First Snow Flakes," and "Comrades," Miss Mildred Cressman, another student at Temple University, was in charge of this group, in presenting the numbers.

Miss Mary Burn and J. Homer Smith led the songs by the grade pupils of the Harriman building. These numbers were: First grade, "Little Jack Horner" and "London Bridge," second grade, "Little Fiddle" and "Hoop Song," third and fourth grade pupils, "Sleighing," and "Snip Snip!" fifth and sixth grades, "My Shadow and I" and "A May Dance," eighth grade, "Shepherd Song," ninth grade, "Morning Song," eighth and ninth grades, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." This group of songs represented those of work and play.

The music instructors who have been working during the past several

FIFTY PER CENT OF LICENSES WERE TO NON-RESIDENTS

Half of Total of Marriage Licenses Given To Outsiders

MORRISVILLE IN LEAD

Bristol Takes Second Place With Five Applicants During January

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 1.—About 50 per cent of the fifty-seven marriage licenses issued in Bucks County in January were granted to non-residents of the county, including twenty-one persons from Trenton and sixteen from Philadelphia. Thirty of the applicants lived in boroughs of the county while the rest came from the rural sections.

Thirty-nine women told the clerk they had occupations other than house work when the docket entry of the license application was made.

The record also shows that two divorced men and three divorced women were granted licenses. Twenty-two of the applicants had been married before, two of them having been married twice before.

The number of licenses granted in January is in excess of January a year ago indicating that another record might be made this year in the number issued. In 1927 a record number of licenses were granted in the county.

Morrisville, with nine applicants, led all other boroughs in the county. Bristol had seven, Doylestown five, and Newtown four. There were no licenses granted to residents of New Hope, Perkasie or Yardley in January.

Twenty-three of the applicants were under twenty-one, while the big majority ranged in ages between twenty-one and twenty-five. The oldest applicant, a male, was sixty-three, and he had been married on two previous occasions. The oldest female was sixty, and had been married on one previous occasion. The average age of the male applicant was twenty-nine, while the females averaged twenty-five.

The marriage license docket in the office of the Orphans' Court shows that only four of the male applicants in January were older than their partners.

In one case a widower of forty-eight years was granted a license to wed a young lady of twenty-five summers.

Four of the female applicants had recently reached the age of sixteen. Seven of the applicants were over fifty.

The ages grouped as follows for the January record are:
Under 21 years 3 20
21 to 25 years 29 17
25 to 30 years 8 9
30 to 40 years 7 4
40 to 50 years 7 4
50 to 60 years 2 3
over 60 years 1 0

The ages of the applicants as they applied for licenses, with previous marriages marked with (*), are as follows:

28-18, 19-17, 26-25, 22-18, *58-60, 27-16, 21-19, 28-22, *35-26, 22-20, 26-21, 22-21, 21-21, 21-16, 24-21, *37-26, 23-21, *25-24, 22-17, 23-18, 23-17, *34-45, 24-22, *47-46, 22-21, 42-34, 21-20, *40-46, 42-40, 22-18, 22-18, 20-18, 32-27, 21-18, 23-21, 19-16, 22-18, 21-20, 31-31, *57-51, 21-16, *30-25, 48-30, *48-25, 21-17, 23-23, *63-58, 21-21, 23-21, 26-21, 25-25, 22-21, 22-21, *35-35, 24-21, 24-27, 47-27.

THE "FORBID IT" COMPLEX

It is one of the most improbable things in the world that women, young or old, will surrender their right to smoke, merely because some think it unconventional or because school and college faculties "forbid" the use of tobacco among female students.

Two of the larger colleges for girls in the East have lifted bans against the use of tobacco. The ice being now broken it is inevitable that other schools will follow.

Of course there are dissidents in the schools now permitting smoking and there will be dissidents in every other school which, in the future, lifts the cigarette ban. This, however, does not alter the obvious fact that the opposition is weakening.

Liberals are not so much surprised at the repeal of "anti-nicotine" edicts by two women's colleges as to learn that such edicts were in existence and being enforced. Many, probably, have been under the impression that college women are mature enough for self-government as to personal manners and conduct. That administrators of the institutions of higher learning have disagreed with them is now apparent.

Although one may disapprove of the use of tobacco by women, none can justly deny woman the right to smoke. There are limits to which the majority can force its will and opinions upon the minority.

Is it strange that where protest against lifting the tobacco ban on college women have been heard they have, hardly without exception, emanated from non-smoking college women? Does their opinion that smoking is unbecoming to femininity give them the right to deny others the right to smoke?

THE MODERN GIRL

Those who have observed that the average girl today is healthy, pretty and trained to work require no defense of the modern young woman. Still there are some who, misled by the excess of talk about flappers, have the notion that the average of the girls of today is not as high as in former times.

The girls of today probably do more work than those of any other time, for the reason that the modern world has brought more occupations suitable to them. Nor are all those called flappers to be thought of as light, flippant creatures; certainly not as being immoral. Of course there are extremes among them, as in all classes and in all periods. But no class should be judged as a whole by the few in it who may be unfortunate. However, the worst flappers of today could not possibly be inveighed against more severely than were their sisters of ancient times.

Cato the Censor had his troubles with them, and the Bible also has many commentaries on their dress and conduct. What modern flapper could act in a more flippant manner than the daughters of Zion described in the sixteenth verse of the third chapter of Isaiah; daughters who were haughty, and walked with stretched-forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they went, and making a tinkling with their feet? The rest of the chapter also has much to say of their dress. In all ages there have been extremes just as today.

He who hesitates is old-fashioned.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 1 (I. N. S.)—Permission to tap trees for maple sap has been granted by District Forester Harry Elliott of the Susquehanna district with headquarters in Condersport. There is a provision that the tap holes be confined to the first few feet of the tree and that sap products will be worth more than the amount of wood damaged in the process. A nominal charge is made for the privilege.

From five to 40 gallons of sap are taken from each tree during the season, but the average is 10 to 20 gallons. One tree usually yields from one pint to one gallon of syrup and from one to seven pounds of maple sugar.

"BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a divorce lawyer to whom she is engaged, discovers that her younger sister, Helene, has become infatuated with Huntley Sheldon, a wealthy Don Juan whose wife, Nita, is making a fourth attempt to divorce him. Myra locks Helene in her room, disguises herself, and goes to Sheldon's hunting lodge to ask him to give up her sister. Sheldon recognizes Myra and pretends a heart attack, forcing her to remain with him all night. Next morning Nita and her detective arrive, but Myra escapes without being identified. Then she finds that Helene has eloped with Ralph Naylor.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"Well, it seems that your sister got locked in, somehow," the girl laughed. "She didn't quite seem to know how it all happened, herself, and the doors haven't spring locks. I was on the desk myself, and about nine o'clock I had a call from the people in the apartment below yours, complaining of noise on your floor. They said someone was hammering right on the floor, and it sounded as though the ceiling was coming through. So I sent one of the boys up to investigate, and he told me that when he got up to your door he heard some one screaming and pounding."

"How terrible. Helene must have been very frightened."

"O, she didn't seem frightened at all," the girl explained. "She was mad, but she soon got over that. It was the boy who was frightened."

How safe she felt here.

He came running down and asked me for the pass key, and said that it sounded as though some one was being murdered. He got one of the other boys to go up with him, and they let themselves into the apartment. They talked to your sister through the door, and she explained about being locked in, so they got another pass key, and opened the door for her. She had been pounding on the floor, trying to attract some one's attention."

"I'm sorry that you had so much disturbance," Myra apologized. "I can't imagine how Helene ever did such a thing. But she's so careless. She might have locked the door herself and then lost the key."

"I don't know, and she was so excited about running off that I didn't ask her about it."

"Well, she made a wreck of the closet door. That'll have to be mended."

"All right, Miss Martin, I'll send some one to fix it for you, if you want me to."

"I wish you would. And thank you for all your trouble. I'm glad I found out what happened."

"O, that's all right, Miss Martin. I hope your sister's very happy."

"I'm sure she will be. Good bye."

Myra returned to her apartment with a light heart. Everything had turned out well after all, and Helene had very wisely kept quiet about it all. She took up a book and began to read.

CHAPTER X

Bright and early on Monday morning Myra was at her desk, beginning her week's work. The Sunday evening spent at home, alone, without the bright chatter of Helene, had seemed very dull and drear, but Myra reminded herself that she must get used to it. For she would still have many evenings to spend at home, and alone, until she and Leonard were married. The thought brought back the faint shiver of fear that kept clutching at her throat. If Leonard ever found out—

But now, with the familiar office surroundings about her she felt more secure, more like her old self.

A note that morning from Helene, too, had helped raise her spirits. It was characteristic of her sister, being very vague about everything that was happening and full of thrilling messages. She and Ralph were on a short motor tour, going across the border, probably. They had been married late Saturday night in some little town. Helene wasn't quite sure where, with a license that Ralph had been keeping on hand in case of emergency. Anyway, they weren't going to stay away long, because Ralph had to get back to his business, so they'd both see Myra very shortly, and Ralph sent his love.

And now Leonard had come in and Myra stood talking to him in his private office.

"Leonard, Helene's eloped with Ralph Naylor," Myra was telling all the news of the week—at least, most of it. "I was out Saturday evening, having dinner and doing some shopping, and when I came in, about ten o'clock, I found a note from Helene, telling me that she had gone off with Ralph."

"Well, Naylor's a nice chap. I like him," Leonard answered. "And I think Helene will be very happy with him. I do hope he doesn't try to 'reform' her and make her grow up—she's so lovely, just as she is." "Yes, isn't she?" Myra agreed heartily and truthfully. "But I do hate to see her married so young. She seems more like a child to me than a grown up person. I suppose that's because I'm older, and I've always had more responsibility. But, now that she's done it, I'm glad. I always did worry about her a little, especially after she got out of school."

"O, Helene's all right. She'll get along like a house afire. And I am rather glad, too, because now you won't have to worry about her, and you can spend more time thinking about your wedding. How about that?" Gilbert laughed and kissed her cheek.

"Yes, perhaps it is better," Myra answered, laughing, too. How very safe she felt here, with Leonard's kindness and his love seeming to shut out those blurred spots of that awful night that now receded into the dim distance. "I had a letter from Helene this morning, and she said they'd been married Saturday night—she didn't quite know where, and they were motoring. They'll be back, soon, though. But the apartment was so lonely on Sunday night without her."

"Never mind. It won't be that way long. We'll get things settled for ourselves very soon, now," Leonard comforted.

"O, but you haven't heard the funniest part of the story, Leonard," Myra laughed. Yes, she could laugh now, she thought, and tell the story without many quivers of misgiving. "It seems that Helene got herself locked into her bedroom, in some way—no one knows quite how, but you know how careless she is with her things, and she may have lost the key or something. And when she couldn't get out, she pounded on the floor until the people in the apartment below sent in a complaint to the desk, and then the elevator boys came up with the pass key and finally rescued her."

"Well, it's a good thing she has some one to look after her," Gilbert smiled, "and keep her from getting locked up again."

"Yes, isn't it?" There, that went off all right, Myra told herself. Now the worst was over. Helene should never know the rest of the story, and the secret lay between two people, and in so far as Myra was concerned, it would always remain a secret.

"O, by the way—you got in touch with Evans, didn't you. His wife's case comes up today," Gilbert was returning to the business of the hour.

"Yes, I phoned him, and he said he would not appear to contest the case. Then I phoned Mrs. Evans and she promised that she'd be here at two o'clock promptly."

"I want to go over the papers on the case again. Lord, there's a nasty one," he pulled open a drawer and took out of the files a bundle of papers. He sat down at his desk and began leafing through them and reading them.

"Do you want me to wait?" Myra asked.

"Yes, please. There may still be some work to do on them."

Myra stood patiently beside the desk awaiting instructions. Gilbert read and reread, and the more he read the more deeply he began to frown. Finally he pushed the papers away disgusted.

"God, what a rotten case. It almost makes me sick," he looked up at Myra, shaking his head.

"Yes, it is, isn't it?" Myra agreed unthinkingly.

"How I detest these 'other women.' I'm glad Evans isn't going to contest it—he told me he wouldn't, though. I hate to argue this stuff out. This way makes it so much easier. I feel rather sorry for Mrs. Evans. She seems like a nice sort of person. Why women can't let other women's husbands stand—"

Gilbert spoke harshly, but with a certain tone of pride, as though nothing of that sort could ever happen to him.

"Blow it out?" said the old man. "I couldn't. It was in a bottle."

RUNNER'S CHANCES OF COMING HERE SLIM

By Davis J. Walsh
L. A. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—According to officials of the Amateur Athletic Union, Charley Pyle, arch-seducer of amateur reititude, or maybe a first, sly, subtle seducer, soon will sail for Finland to attempt to get Paavo Nurmi out of hock with the athletic uncle abroad by persuading him to turn professional.

The matter, I take it, will be discussed in the universal language of the fountain pen in order that there may be no misunderstanding. The pen not only is mightier than the sword but far less liable to misinterpretation; in fact, its message usually is quite clear if you get the name right and confine yourself to numerals.

These same A. A. U. officials, who are trying to get from under and thus escape the onus of sponsoring anything that might lead to the professionalism of Nurmi and Herr Doktor Peltzer in the face of the impending Olympic games, were authority for the statement that Nurmi actually had started for America about a week of ten days ago. They say he got no nearer than the Finnish frontier where he was arbitrarily refused passage. The Finns, it seems, had heard of this American ogre who spoke of anything less than $100,000 with an involuntary sneer.

They also heard of Pyle's plan to bring Nurmi, Edwin Wide, the Herr Doktor and, if possible, Lloyd Hahn, together in a series of races between 600 yards and one mile. Failing that, he hoped to send Nurmi running in the general direction of New York in his proposed fallen-arch go-if-you-please from coast to coast. Willie Kohlenmaier, brother of Hannes, and the stoutest professional marathoner of his day, is another Finn who is mentioned as a possible starter in this contest, of seeing America first, last and too much.

The hook-up with Nurmi and the Finns in general is alleged to be seen through the rather close association being maintained between Pyle and Hugo Quist, who managed Nurmi's tour so well several years ago that the A. A. U. almost decided to issue registration cards and entry blanks to future managers. Quist, A. A. U. officials declare, now is occupying Pyle's suite at the Vanderbilt, rent free.

It is pretty well agreed that Pyle's chances of lining up Hahn with avowed professionalism are almost nil, only more so, and nothing has been heard that would connect Wide with such a project. As for Nurmi and the Herr Doktor, the former cannot leave Finland unless he makes his presence highly immaterial to the Finns by spurning his amateur past and, in the case of Peltzer, the A. A. U. simply is taking no chances, if that many.

Upward of one hundred invitations have been issued to the Herr Doktor to run in meets since German officials opened the door several days ago for three possible appearances by him in this country. The bids have arrived at the A. A. U. office from about twenty clubs in the New York district; from Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Pittsburgh and kindred cities. The thing has been an overnight deluge. They simply must see the Herr Doktor or somebody will be sent to bed without his supper.

However, German overtures on this matter were so worded that the real burden of proof in preserving Peltzer's status intact must fall upon the A. A. U. The latter today was displaying a distinct tendency to re-pass the buck to its original designers. Two members of the Foreign Relations Committee already have declared against Peltzer running here at all; another member said he wouldn't vote until Peltzer made known the games in which he preferred to appear. A fourth favored his appearance only at well established, front-line meets such as those sponsored by the Boston A. A., the Millrose A. A. here, the Meadowbrook Club in Philadelphia and the Illinois A. C. in Chicago.

The latter's bid was especially appealing because the club offered to donate the proceeds to the American Olympic Fund. The Herr Doktor himself likes the dirt track out there; therefore, if he runs at all, Chicago is likely to get him. Another good bet is the national indoor championships and a third is the Millrose games in early February.

Weeks in the various buildings throughout the borough have now completed their practice work here, and a new corps will take up the work in the town within a short time. Those who outlined the program and were in charge of Tuesday's entertainment, which was a most enjoyable one, were: Miss Ruth Gilmer, Miss Gertrude Spengel, Miss Mildred Cressman, Miss Mary Burn, and J. Homer Smith. The accompanist, Frank Murphy, is also a student at Temple University, and acts as choir master and organist at the Church of St. Jude and the Nativity, Philadelphia.

The classes in the several buildings were closed early in the afternoon in order that the teachers and their scholars might go to the high school building for the presentation of the numbers.

renting of the property but nothing definite has been reached as yet.

Regret was expressed by Mr. Coles over the necessity of severing his agreeable business relations extending over a long period of years, during which employers and most of the employees have labored as one big family.

Six or seven weavers and others, employees of the mill, headed by Edward P. Hullings, Allen Hatcher and George J. Nack, of the Marne Highway, are talking of organizing a new co-operative concern and building a small mill for their own use.

The intention is to obtain a small piece of ground advantageously situated, build a mill of modest size and operate it on a small scale.

Negotiations have been undertaken for the purchase of a suitable building site after the acquirement of which no time will be lost getting things in shape.

Both Mr. Royle and Mr. Coles admitted having heard that Mr. Royle's brother might return to operate the mill with his own machinery, but both gentlemen agreed that this "talk" did not seem to offer an early remedy for the situation. No specific offer has been received from the property as yet but some rather general inquiries have been received from some of the well-known mills of the country.

The employees, facing idleness from the day of closing, have been active in other directions and some of them are said to have obtained good positions elsewhere.

Married Six Times and Will Try It Once More

LUCK in odd numbers?

Mrs. Myrtle Miller of Chicago thinks so, or at the very least she's an optimist, because she's been married no less than six times and confides that she's contemplating going up to the altar for the seventh, in the near future.

Mrs. Miller is candid about her collection of ex-husbands.

"Some were good," she says, "some were fair, and some were rotten."

Here's a chronological account of the Chicago woman's matrimonial experiences:

1. Mr. Miller, 8 years;
2. Mr. Seth, 2 months;
3. Mr. George, 18 months;
4. Mr. Billings, 5 months;
5. Mr. Williams, 6 months;
6. Mr. Wilson, 6 weeks.

In the order of their appearance—and disappearance—her husbands were (1), a leather worker; (2), a carpenter; (3), a soldier; (4), a silk salesman; (5), a cement contractor, and (6), a salesman.

Mrs. Miller keeps her own personal lawyer, who is called upon rather regularly to go to the courts and free her from her latest and latest matrimonial bonds.

mates, could not be reached to comment upon the Chicagoan who threatens to eclipse her record.
